Top taggers honored at Game Fish Tagger Awards

By Janet Krenn

(March 23, 2011) The angler’s adage “It’s called fishin’, not catchin’” doesn’t apply to the nearly 150 taggers that caught and tagged a collective 16,451 fish in 2010. Those who tagged the most fish were recognized at the Virginia Game Fish Tagging Program’s Tagger Awards on March 3, held at Bass Pro Shop in Hampton, VA.

The Awards honor those volunteer anglers who out-tagged their colleagues in any of 12 categories, including most tagged fish overall, most recaptured fish, and most tagged fish of a single species. First place taggers in each category received a plaque, and runners-up received a tackle bucket with fishing gear provided by the Bass Pro Shop.

The Virginia Game Fish Tagging Program has been a cooperative project of the Virginia Marine Resources Commission (VMRC) and the Virginia Institute of Marine Science (VIMS) for 16 years. The Program helps fisheries resource managers by providing data on migration and population of 10 species of fish. Volunteer anglers undergo training and tag-and-release the fish. When other anglers catch a tagged fish, they report the recaptured fish.

“We’re pleased to recognize the dedication of our outstanding group of volunteer anglers who make the Tagger Program possible,” said Susanna Musick, Tagger Program coordinator at VIMS and Virginia Sea Grant Marine Extension Agent.

This year’s Tagger Awards winners were:
